Water Out South Puget Sound dries local residence

Last week, Water Out South Puget Sound was called by Damon Hoffman of Olympia, Washington. Damon had discovered a large pool of water in front of his upstairs kitchen dishwasher. Damon is a maintenance technician in the US Army and went to work trying to find the problem. After pulling the washing machine out Damon discovered water damage throughout the washing machine cabinet structure. Damon then went down stairs and found a flooded recreation room below the kitchen. Water was dripping from the ceiling in several places and the carpet was soaked. Water had also seeped into an adjacent downstairs bathroom. Damon did not know the extent of the water damage and called Water Out for help.

An infrared inspection revealed water damage to the upstairs kitchen floor and sheet rock wall. Water damage was also found in the adjacent dining room wall. Down stairs all of the ceiling sheet rock in both the recreation room and bathroom was soaked. A good portion of the recreation room carpet was also wet. After taking confirmation moisture readings in the high 80's MC, Water Out South Puget Sound set up a Water Out unit and began drying. A zip wall was set up to divide the non-affected areas. After a day and half of drying the zip wall position was changed to isolate the recreation room. Three days later all of the sheet rock and carpet were completely dry. All moisture readings were less than 6% MC. The only additional work was some drywall and paint touch up. Water Out was able to save all of the kitchen and dining room floors and sheet rock walls. The downstairs recreation room and bathroom sheet rock and all carpeting were also saved.

Thanks Wally!

Water Out of Raleigh dries local dentist office

Katie Reuther from the office PettyJohn's Cleaning and Restoration/Water Out of Raleigh sent in this story: "Imagine this: It's a beautiful Sunday afternoon, after church you swing by the office to pick up some files to get ahead on next week's work. You walk into your dentist office and are surprised to find puddles of water everywhere! No one ever suspected the water supply to the coffee machine in the break room could be defective! Fortunately, you know exactly who to call: Pettyjohn's Cleaning & Restoration and Water Out of Raleigh. Lucky for you, your office is closed on Mondays. With the team from Water Out of Raleigh to the rescue, the entire office will be thoroughly dried and business will resume as normal Tuesday morning... and your customers will not suspect a thing! [True story!]"

Thanks Katie!
