Water Out Atlanta tackles major water loss at a college in North Georgia

Frank Leff of Water Out Atlanta in Duluth, GA sent in some photos and story on a water loss they did at a college in North Georgia. Frank Leff reports:

"We were contacted on a Friday night by a small college located north of Georgia. The loss was caused by pipes that froze in the attic of one of the dorms causing major flooding in the attic, first and second floors. The first contractor the college contacted wanted to remove all of the carpet and padding. They also wanted to tear out the ceiling and walls on both levels. Thankfully, someone at the school was familiar with the Water Out® system and contacted our office.

Water Out Atlanta arrived to the jobsite immediately. After inspecting the structure we set up our Water Out® trailer and began drying the structure that evening. After four days the building was completely dry. By using the Water Out® system we were able to save the carpet and padding and none of the ceils or walls were removed. The school maintenance department said we saved them 3 weeks of work. Drying the dorm in 4 days avoided any interruptions with the students, since they were off of school during this time. Needless to say, everyone was pleased!"

Great Job Frank!

Water Out in Libertyville, Illinois dries and saves hardwood floors

Will Hughes of Metropolitan Fire Restoration Services / Water Out in Libertyville, Illinois took on a large residential loss this winter. The clients were out of town when a pipe burst in one of the upstairs bathrooms that was under construction. The water spread from the second floor to the basement affecting the homes original hardwood floors that were installed back in 1935. This massive home included plaster ceilings that were affected as well. Will and his team set up two of their Water Out trailers and six days later they managed to successfully dry the entire structure and those precious hardwood floors were saved. The clients were extremely happy!

Keep up the good work guys!
